

Coinerve Network Reward System

Introduction

The Coinverve Network Reward System is a core component of the ecosystem's capital architecture, designed to align participant incentives with the productive performance of capital across the network.

The system distributes rewards based on a defined percentage of total team daily earnings generated within the network.

This structure ensures that incentives remain directly tied to consistent economic activity and performance, reinforcing Coinverve's philosophy of productivity-driven participation while maintaining a transparent and governed reward environment.

How it works

Each day, capital within the network generates verified earnings based on the active strategies or mandates in use. The Reward System allocates a percentage of those daily earnings from your network to you, based on your position within the network structure.

This means rewards are calculated from the actual earnings produced by your team's capital activity, not from deposits or idle balances.

As your network grows and their capital continues to generate returns, your share of the collective daily earnings increases accordingly.

Example

Assume your team generates $5,000 in total daily earnings.

If your total reward share is 42%, your reward for that day would be: $$5,000 \times 42\% = $2,100$ .

So you earn $2,100 for that day from your network's activity.

If the next day your network generates $7,500 in daily earnings, your reward becomes: $$7,500 \times 42\% = $3,150$
